Haig Says Crisis 'Far' From Over

Polish Resistance Expected to Grow

WASHINGTON - Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., de-claring that the crisis over Poland is "far from over," predicted Tues-day that resistance to the martial law government is likely to in-

He also accused Cuba of "systematically expanding its capacity to project military power beyond its own shores" and said the Unit-ed States will do "whatever is necsary" to contain the guerrilla war in El Salvador.

In testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Mr. Haig asserted that Western unity in opposition to the military crackdown in Poland comes as an "unpleasant surprise" to the Soviet Union, which he charged with "complicity in the Polish crisis." He said that until Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Polish leader, relaxes his grip "passive and not-so-passive resistance will probably increase."

Mr. Haig, reviewing his trip last week to Israel and Egypt, said leaders of both countries agreed to strive for a declaration of princi-ples on Palestinian self-rule "as soon as possible."

Speaking of Cuba, Mr. Haig said the arrival this year of a sec-ond squadron of Soviet MiG-23 aircraft and 63,000 tons of military supplies increases the island nation's military arsenal, which al-ready was "the largest air, land and sea inventory of the region."

He said Nicaragua is being ex-ploited as a base "for the export of subversion and armed intervention throughout the region."

Mr. Haig said the clandestine infiltration of arms into El Salvador "is again approaching the high levels recorded just before last year's so-called final offensive."

No Deadline

Turning to the Middle East, Mr. Haig emphasized that no deadlines have been set for reaching a decla-ration of principles on Palestinian autonomy. "Hard work and intellectual ingenuity will be needed to bridge the great differences that divide" Israel and Egypt, he said. The secretary of state said President Reagan had approved of his selection of Richard Fairbanks, the former assistant secretary of state for congressional relations, to be the new Middle East peace negotiator to work full time on this problem.

As a result of his trip, Mr. Hais said, Egypt has been assured that Israel will withdraw as scheduled from the last sector of the Sina Desert on April 25.

Mr. Haig said that in his nearly eight bours of talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gro-myko a week ago he raised the issues of Afghanistan, Cuba and "the plight of dissidents and minorities in the Soviet Union." He said that he told Mr. Gromyko that a constructive relationship with the United States can only be based "on greater Soviet restraint, especially in the use of force or the threat of violence." Mr. Haig defended Mr. Reagan's decision to repay $71 million of Poland's debt to U.S. banks and not to ask that the banks declare Poland in default. The secretary said that although "all options remain open," a deci-sion to force Poland into bank-incident — in light of President Reagan's wounding bere last March and reports late last year of so-called Libyan hit squads sent to assassinate U.S. officials — investigators worried that the car might have been struck by a bullet.

The Associated Press quoted a source who spoke with Mr. Bush at the White House as saying the vice president himself thought it might have been a bullet.

As he arrived at the Senate in late morning, Mr. Bush was asked whether he knew his car might have been the target of a projectile. Mr. Bush replied: "No, I couldn't tell that. It was just a big bang."

Security was very tight when the vice president reached the Capitol, marking a general heightening of protection after the scare.

Severe Cuts in Social Programs Expected in New Reagan Budget

By Herbert H. Denton and Robert G. Kaiser Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - The new budget President Reagan is to send to Congress next week will call for deep new cass in funding for Medicaid, food stamps, subsidized housing, welfare, aid to education and many other of the basic federal social programs, according to a partial draft obtained by The Washington Post.

Judging by the draft — which is theoretically subject to additional revisions, although officials say none is being made — President Reagan has decided to reopen nearly all the fiercest budget battles that he fought last spring, including many that he lost cluding many that he lost.

For example, the new budget calls for eliminating the Economic Development Administration, a popular public-works program that will provide localities with year. It was saved last year largely by moderate Republicans in the reductions in the future cost of re-tirement benefits for federal civilian and military employees and deep cuts in the Medicare program for the elderly and disabled. The Medicare cuts would amount to $16 billion a year by fiscal 1987, a much larger sum than previous re-ports had suggested the administration plans to seek.

The documents obtained by the Post say that under the 1983 budget, federal aid to state and local governments would be kept at about the level of 1974 in terms of purchasing power. That is about the same level as this year.

The documents also say that many of the new budget cuts would be achieved by creating eight new block grants into which

Reagan Promises Flexibility in Shifting Burdens to States By Steven R. Weisman

Mr. Mugabe's much-heralded policy of reconciliation after a seven-year guerrilla war provided a brief honeymoon but now blackwhite relations have deteriorated to the extent that the government's attempts to form a multiracial society are endangered. In a series of interviews and

FRENCH ADMINISTRATION

The election of François Mitterrand and the subsequent Socialist victory in the French parliamentary elections clearly mark an important turning point for the French economy.

With the cooperation of the new Socialist government, the International Herald Tribune has organized a conference designed to help senior executives of foreign companies judge how the new administration's policies will affect their company's activities and investment in France.

Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy will open this meeting on "New French Economic Policies," to be held February 8 and 9 at the Intercontinental Hotel in Paris.

The program will include presentations by Jacques Delors, Finance Minister, Michel Jobert, Minister of Foreign Trade; Michel Rocard, Minister of Planning and Regional Development; Nicole Questiaux, Minister of Social Policy; Pierre Dreyfus, Minister of Industry; Jean

Auroux, Minister of Labour; Andre Chandernagor, Minister delegated to the Minister of Foreign Affairs, in charge of European Affairs; and Laurent Fabius, Minister delegated to the Finance Minister, in charge of the Budget, as well as Jacques Attali, Special Counsellor to the President; Bernard Attali, President of D.A.T.A.R., the French government's regional development agency; Christian Goux, Chairman of the Economic and Finance Committee of the National Assembly, and Thierry de Monthrial, Director of the French Institute of Foreign Relations.

Additional insights on various aspects of doing business in France will be provided by André Bergeron, Secretary General of the "Force Ouvrière" trade union, by a panel of international bankers and by a panel of industrialists. The former will include Hervé de Carmoy, General

Manager of the Midland Bank Ltd.; Jean Deflassieux, Director of International Affairs, Crédit Lyonnais, and Edouard Velten, Advisor to the Board of Executive Directors, Bayerische

Vereinsbank. The industrialists' panel, to be chaired by David McGovern, President of the American Chamber of Commerce in France, will include: Rudolph Boniface, Chairman of Ford France; Jean Gandois, Chairman of Rhône-Poulenc; Jean-Luc Lagardère, Chairman of Matra; Bernard Lathière, President of Airbus Industries, and Akio Morita, Chairman of Sony Corporation.

Each presentation will be followed by a question and answer period, and simultaneous French-English translation will be provided at all times.

U.S. Irate as UN Body Delays Poland Debate

International Herald Tribune GENEVA - The UN Human Rights Commission voted Tuesday to postpone debate on human rights violations in Poland, anger-

The debate was brought to an abrupt close by the Bulgarian chairman of the 43-member commission, Ivan Garvalov. The suspension prompted Westero charges that he had ignored or misinterpreted the commission's rules of procedure.

Asked whether the United States would leave the commission, Mr. Abrams said, "We have suffered many defeats in many UN institutions. Our view is that you fight for what is right, you don't walk away."

When Mr. Garvalov's proposal to close the debate was put to the commission, all 10 Western delegations on the commission, along with Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay and Japan, declined to participate in the vote. Eleven delegations voted in favor, and 14 abstained.

The vote followed a day of pro-cedural maneuvering that was complex even by the standards of the commission. It began with a Western motion — made by Canada - that the Polish crisis be debated under a general item on human rights abuses, including reports on El Salvador, Guatemala and Bolivia. One Thai officer said about 200 Vietnamese shells landed in Thailand. Military sources at the border town of Aranyaprathet, 230 miles (370 kilometers) east of Bangkok, said that as many as 2,000 Thais fled their homes because of the exchange of fire. There were no reports of casualties, but the sources said peasant homes were damaged extensively.

A Western analyst said the incident was probably part of the at-tempt by Vietnamese troops occupying Cambodia to dislodge rebel Khmer Rouge forces from strongholds near the Thai border.

Bonn Aides Are Said To Be Split on Job Plan

BONN — Chancellor Heimus Schmidt's coalition unexpectedly decided that further talks were ceeded Tuesday on a job-creation plan, political sources said. The issue, over which Mr. Schmidt has threatened to resign, seemed largely resolved Monday night after nine hours of talks among the chancellor, senior ministers and leaders of the ruling Social Democratie and Free Democratic parties.

But the sources said Mr. Schmidt's comment that there was accord on the broad outlines ap-parently meant only that the coalition had agreed that a job program must be enacted and that one would be approved by the Cabinet

Wednesday. Final accord had not yet been reached on such matters as the size of the program and how it should be financed, and further talks were being held Tuesday evening, the sources said. They added that a planned meeting between Mr. Schmidt and economic ministers was being postponed until Wednesday, just before the regular weekly Cabinet meeting.

LOS ANGELES - When attorney Steve King is driving his 1980 Cadillac Eldorado, he says he feels safer because of what is in the trunk: the civilian version of the Israeli Uzi submachine gun.

"I can't carry it loaded or with me inside the car because that's illegal," he said. "Un-der the circumstances, it [the trunk] is the only place I can carry it.

In a pinch, Mr. King believes, be could reach the gun quickly despite its location. "You just put in a clip, unfold the stock and you're ready to fire." He said he usually carries three 25-round clips with the gun, which differs from the military edition in that it has a longer barrel and requires a pull on the trigger to fire each bullet.

For Mr. King, the Uzi is the ultimate in self-protection in an urban environment that has changed his attitude about crime and his vulnerability to it. Until last summer, Mr. King said, he had not owned or used a gun since his service days in the early 1960s. Then, on June 10, 1981, a friend and his wife were shot to death in an apparent rob-

There, store manager Judy Martin said demand for the paramilitary guns has been especially noticeable for the last year and a half. She and gun salesman David Ross said that buyers have included doctors, lawyers and businessmen. "It's not always the person in the green camouflage suit who wants to hay," Mr. Martin said. "The kind of people who are huying them aren't survivalists." Colin Gilbert, a real estate developer, says apocalyptic fantasies play no part in his ownership of a Heckler & Koch rifle, a weapon based on one used by West German

Mr. Gilbert and Burt Avedon, president of a New York City company that makes expedition clothing, said they own paramili-tary rifles primarily because they are gun fanciers, not paranoises about crime. Both maintained that the rifles are inferior to bandguns for protection at bome, where the weapons are 100 bulky for close-quarter use.

Mr. Avedon said he bought his Uzi about six months ago because "I thought it was a terrific little piece of engineering.

Nonetheless, self-defense is apparently a major reason wby many people buy paramilitary guns, he and others said. Mr. Avedon speculated that the popularity of these weapons and guns in general with lawabiding citizens is a manifestation of manifestation of the ability of breakdown of confidence in the ability of society to protect us."

There is little doubt that sales of paramilitary weapons are on the rise. But there is disagreement among gun owners about whether these arms should be so readily

Arthur Kassel, president of the Beverly Hills Gun Club, said that he is unhappy with the fact that a paramilitary gun can be bought without the background check that is made during the 15-day waiting period for handguns that California law requires.

Low on Funds For Farmers By Edward Cowan

New York Tones Service
WASHINGTON — The Agriculture Department will soon be imable to make support payments to farmers or to pay off guaranteed export loans held by U.S. hanks unless Congress replenishes the funds of the Commodity Credit

Corp., officials say.
At the Agriculture Department, officials said they hoped for House and Senate passage this week of a resolution that would provide the commission with $5 hillion. But officials at the House Appropriations Committee said it was unclear whether final action would be taken before the weekend.

The congressional officials said President Reagan signed the request for a supplemental appropri-ation on Jan. 25 and that the appropriations subcommittee on agriculture held a hearing and approved a resolution four days later.

The legislators reportedly are ea-ger to replenish the commission's funds not because of the administration decision that $71 million will be repaid to banks bolding overdue loans to Poland but because annual payments to 32,000 rice growers and 210 cotton producers are scheduled to be made in February.

An Agriculture Department of-ficial said Mooday that as of Fri-day the commission had a slightly more than $500 million of checkwriting authority left under its authorization to borrow $20 billion from the lieastry, that wo amount to roughly seven to 10 business days of disbursements, the officials said.

The possibility that the agency might have to stop writing checks next week is worrisome to virtually every member of Congress who represents farmers. The agency makes price-support payments to farmers who put their crops in the government's reserve program and it makes income-support payments to farmers who sell their crops at market prices below the department's target prices.

In the case of rice and cotton, the payments due this month are income-support payments for 1981 crops and so they are important revenues to many farmers. Officials said the agency had been using up its authority to bor-row from the Treasury faster than expected because it paid out last autumn much more to support sag-ging corn prices than had been ex-As for the $71 billion of payments on guaranteed export los to Poland, officials said that for-malities between the banks and the Agriculture Department have not

Alaskan Gas Pipeline Faces Legal Challenge

By Thomas W. Lippman

Washington Paul Service
WASHINGTON — Five states, WASHINGTON — rive states, 24 members of Congress and several consumer groups have filed a legal ehallenge to the financing arrangements for the planned $40-hillion Alaska natural gas pipeline, an action that could delay or possible action of the planned states of the hly cancel the entire project.
In a petition to the U.S. Court of Appeals, the plaintiffs charged that Congress violated its own rules when it approved a waiver to the pipeline construction consortium's charter permitting construction costs to be hilled to consumers in advance.

They said. "The waiver exposes natural gas consumers in 36 states to the costs of financing a massive pipeline project which may never be completed or carry any gas. The expenses consumers will have to pay approximate $32 billion." John G. McMillian, chairman of Northwest Alaskan Pipeline Co.

the consortium of energy compa-nies that received a charter to build the pipeline in 1977, said consumers would have to pay the costs of any delay caused by the

He said the court action "appears to be polincally monvated and totally without foundation or will succeed."

"However, I am extremely concerned that this action, even though unsuccessful, will seriously delay the project and result in major capital cost increases which will be borne by the gas consumer," Mr. McMillian said. "A delay of a year will cost the consumers more than $3 billion."

The issue is not whether gas consumers should have to pay for the pipeline — the law specifies that they pay 75 percent of the construction cost — hut whether they have to pay before the gas starts to flow. The possibility that they might pay for a pipeline that never was built, or from which gas was so expensive that it could not be marketed, is what stirred opposition to the waiver package.

Northwest Alaskan's original charter did not permit advance billing. It also prohibited the oil companies producing the gas on Alaska's North Slope from owning a share of the pipeline, and it re-quired the members of the consor-lium to bear the cost of a $3.6-billion plant for gathering and pro-cessing the gas instead of including it in the costs that eventually would be passed on to consumers.

Northwest Alaskan, unable to obtain financing for the project under those restrictions, asked that they be waived. In October, President Reagan recommended that Congress grant the waivers, and it did so late last year.

Even with the waivers, it was not certain that Northwest Alaskan's lead banks - Bank of America, Citihank, Chase Manhattan and Morgan Guaranty — would be able or willing to arrange adequate long-term financing.

If the court overrules the waivers, the entire project might have to be ahandoned, according to the pipeline company, because oil producers "are reluctant to make a considerable financing commitment without equity partic ipation," or a share of ownership.

Without producer support, private financing will be impossible, the company said.

The pipeline is intended to

LONDON — British business-man Andrew Pyke has been released from prison in Iran after 518 days in captivity, the Foreign

He was turned over to the British interests' section of the Swed-ish Embassy in Tehran which has looked after British affairs since its embassy was closed in September,

N.Y. A-Accident Was Worse Than It First Seemed

Washington Post Service WASHINGTON - The steampipe rupture that closed a nuclearpower plant outside Rochester, N.Y., last week was more serious than originally thought, causing the plant to leak 700 gallons of radioactive cooling water a minute for the first few minutes after the accident.

When the break in the pipe shut the Ginna plant of Rochester Gas Electric, officials of the Nuc Regulatory Commission said the pipe had lost cooling water at 75 gallons a minute.

The regional administrator of the commission, Ronald C. Haynes, corrected himself before Congress Monday, declaring that the leak rate fell to 75 gallons from 700 gallons a minute when the water pressure of the steam boiler fell 1,000 pounds per square inch, from 2,250 psi to 1,250 psi, in less than 4 minutes.

"This suggests that what we saw here was the elassic double-ended pipe break, where a tube was cut in half and leaking water out of both ends," explained Darrell Eisenbut, director of the NRC's licensing division. "It's highly unlikely that more than one tube broke, because the leak was instantaneous, sug-gesting water pouring out of both ends of the same broken pipe at the same time."

Diplomacy of Debt

The Reagan administration has quietly paid U.S. banks $71 million owed them by deadbeat Poland so the banks won't declare the Poles in default. This is the first payment on loans that the Agriculture Department made or guaranteed to finance grain exports. For making it, the administration has come under hot attack for bailing out the repressive Polish regime, not to speak of the Kremlin regime behind it.

The critics have a right to object. It is of-fensive to see the U.S. government lifting from the Polish government, however temporarily, an obligation it freely assumed and a burden that, morally speaking, it and its Soviet partner ought to be compelled to bear. The contrast between the administration's loud public calls for pressure and its quiet provision of temporary relief is painful. President Reagan's aroused supporters would be untrue to their faith in their man if they weren't boiling mad.

Mr. Reagan, however, appears to know something they don't know — unless you subscribe to the tired and patronizing theory that this is another of those decisions his advisers made while he napped. He appears to know that a decision to force Poland into default would yield an immediate political satisfaction but would also inflict potentially devastating damage on the West's banks and trade - especially on Western Europe's banks. At last month's meeting of NATO foreign ministers, the United States got its allies to agree to act — that is, to act together — on the Polish debt. Forcing a default unilaterally would mean the U.S. administration was breaking that common front, bringing considerable complications.

It would be different if the United States lived in isolation so far as friends and obligations are concerned. In those conditions, in which it would be taking upon itself the full consequences of its actions, it could match a policy to the outrage that the administration and so many Americans feel over the continuing assault on Poland. But when the consequences of its actions fall more severely on others than on itself - as they unquestionably would in the event of a Polish default then a measure of restraint is unavoidable, and even statesmanlike. The diplomacy of debt requires a discipline of its own.

'Sir, Even Some of the Passengers up in First Class Are Getting Worried.'

Nervousness at Budget Time

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON — The clock ticks terribly fast for any U.S. president. The fiscal 1983 budget that Ronald Reagan will present to Congress next week is the first that he and his associates have had the opportunity to shape from be-ginning to end. And when that budget year ex-pires, the 1984 presidential campaign will be only three months away.

The breakneck pace of the presidential term is part of the explanation for a wave of uncase that has come over the Republicans and the conservative movement as they await the formal unveiling of what is rightly considered the policy and political centerpiece of any administration.

The budget will reveal in stark terms what Reagan managed to pass over with only fleeting. comments in his State of the Union address: the unhappy fact that this conservative government confronts deficits brushing the $100-billion-a-year level for the rest of this term and beyond.

What the Wall Street Journal called "the baleful effects of big deficits" are only the symptoms of a greater doubt gnaving at conservatives. That is the fear that runaway government and a sick economy may overpower Reagan's remedies.

Last Friday, as a succession of orators tried to galvanize the members of the Republican National Committee into a show of enthusiasm for the

at Committee into a snow or entitusiasm for the mid-term political campaign, copies of that day's Wall Street Journal were being passed around.

The effect was like a cold shower. "As they wrestle with a recession that wasn't supposed to happen," the Republicans read in Ralph E. Winter's lead story, "some businessmen are starting to think the unthinkable — that Reaganomics might never bring the promised prosperity."

The fears may prove unfounded. But, as if by coincidence, several conservative publications and pundits have been giving voice in a feeling of ex-treme nervousness about where Reaganomics is taking the Republican Party and conservatism.

Kevin Phillips, who since the late 1960s has been periodically proclaiming an "emerging Republican majority." said in the latest issue of his newsletter. "The American Political Report":

"There's a growing feeling in conservative and New Right circles that the Reagan economic and policy chortfalls shaping up for 1982 threaten an

Not long ago, Bushy was writing about a long-term Republican "lock" on the electoral college and the presidency. But in his latest memo, he reported widespread fear that the momentum of the conservative thrust "began to stall" in the final quarter of last year.

The conservatives fear an economic-political unraveling. If investors lose faith in Reaganomics. unraveing. If investors lose faith in Reaganomics, the jnb-producing recovery may never come or be quickly aborted. By November, disillusioned voters may snatch away the provisional mandate they gave Reagan and the Republicans in 1980.

None of that is certain, of course. But the very fact that these fears are being voiced shows how thin the surface of patience, confidence and continuous guerrants the Reagan program may be

The credibility of the program will be tested in the reaction to the Reagan budget — and there is little time for recouping if that credibility is lost.

The Reagan administration has come perilously close to confessing that all its fulminating about Poland is bluster. While demanding in television propaganda that the Kremlin "Let Poland Be Poland," it has devoted its real energies to letting Warsaw and Moscow avoid the penalties of Polish bank-ruptcy. Furtively, the administration has paid off a Polish debt of $71 million to U.S. banks and thus has set the stage for paying $400 million more in 1982. The threats of a credit squeeze, by which the president wanted to stiffen the bargaining power of Poland's Solidarity union and Catholic Church, are thus evaporating into hot air.

The debts in question are guaranteed by the U.S. government, so this is no raid on the Treasury. The offense is procedural — contorting the rules to avoid a formal Polish default. But it remains an offense; such panicky concern for Western banking can only confirm the Communists' contempt for capitalist diplomacy.

Poland is bankrupt. It owes the West more than $26 billion. Governments either lent or guaranteed more than half of that, so private banks are at risk for $10 billion or $12 billion. West Germans are the most exposed; U.S. banks have bad debts of $1.2 billion. But as long as Poland paid interest on these sums, no one spoke the dirty word "default"; the loans were dutifully renewed to avoid the shock of writing them off.

This "rolling over" came to a halt with the declaration of martial law in December. President Reagan imposed modest sanctions against Warsaw and Moscow but threatened more if the suppression continued. Given his distaste for a Soviet grain embargo, that meant only one thing: no new credits and a formal default that might damage all Com-

low that path, fearing not only the jolt to banks but the loss of Communist trade. Every creditor, however, held the power to force default and set off a scramble to seize Polish assets and rescue the West's banks. There matters stood when U.S. banks failed to collect $71 million in January and asked the Agriculture Department, as guarantor, to make them whole. In the dead of night, Agriculture changed the rules that required a prior notice of default and paid Poland's debt. The State and Treasury departments insisted on this subterfuge to "protect" the credit markets. And they left their president naked at his mi-

It is obviously foolish to ignite a banking crisis that injures the West more than the East. But as Felix Rohatyn and others observe, chaos is not the only alternative to inaction.

If economie pressure is to be the West's main diplomatic weapon, the Polish debt should by now have been nationalized by all Western governments so that they can truly manage it. That requires buying out the banks' uncovered holdings at, say, 50 cents on the dollar, and then, as the price of more credit and orderly trade, demanding that the Soviet bloc respond with reliable payments and humane rule in Poland.

In the back of every banker's mind has been the thought that the Kremlin was good countries in recent years. If the United States now insists that the most brutal Soviet methods will not be condoned in the service of this debt, then it has to employ the only significant leverage at hand: Make the Russians pay for the luxury of their tyranny - or quit the hand-wringing.

Shift the Burden to Moscow: Declare Poland Bankrupt

NEW YORK - When New York testered on the brink of insolvency in 1975, many con-servatives advocated that the city declare bankruptcy to symbolize the bankruptcy of liberalism car-ried to extremes. The symbolic lesson, however, would have been devastating to both the city and the state.

A much stronger argument can be made that Poland should be declared bankrupt. Poland owes more than $26 billion to Western banks and govern-ments. It is not only incapable of paying back any of the principal on this debt but also may be able to meet its interest payments only with Soviet assistance. The technical arguments about whether to declare Poland in default are pure

"theology" — in fact, Puland has been in default for some time.

The real question about Polish credits is not whether to roll over the debt. Rather: Who will lend Poland the $20 billion to $30 billion and the $20 billion to $30 bi lion of additional capital it may require? Who will impose the harsh economic discipline that might be needed to put the country back on

Poland has been in economic shambles for years. The level of ansterity and sacrifice that would have to be imposed as part of any new credits would be drastic, and the life of the Polish people might be very much harsher than in re-

One has only to think back to the United States's loans of the 1920s, set up to refinance post-World War I reparation payments that Germany could not afford, to see the danger of a nation's turning against its creditors.

No Western bank nr govern-ment should lead such an effort; nor should any international institutinn, such as the International Monetary Fund, do so.

The Soviet Uninn exercises po-litical and military control over Pnland, so the Soviet Union should take the burden of Imancing Paland, together with the blame that may be attached to the resulting social and economic conditions.

It is to the clear advantage of the West to put the burden of the Polish economy squarely on the Soviet Union. It is also to our advantage to emphasize the economic bankruptcy of Communism by declaring Poland bankrupt. Détente does unt require that large gifts be made to the Communist world. Loans that are not susceptible to collectinn become gifts. The loans to Poland do not stand alone. The Communist world's total borrowings from the West are estimated at more than about $15 billion to Western Eu-rope, all or most of which was uld-mately repaid. Even taking inflation into account, Western credits in the Communist world far ex-ceed comparable credits under the Marshall Plan, with less prospect for repayment and clearly no prospect for the kind of economic and political partnership that the Unit-ed States found in Europe.

If the West does not refinance the Communist world, the Soviet Union will have to do it Moscow should be required to refinance all of the satellite countries: The benefits of conquest should carry the burdens of support.

The Western banking system is in fragile condition, but it will not come tumbling down with a bank-ruptcy of Poland, although such a bankruptcy would entail unques-tionable risk and should be bandled with care.

Private banks hold probably no more than 50 percent of Poland's credits, with governments holding the balance. Many West German banks and their shareholders would suffer considerable losses. Some U.S. banks would take writeoffs that they would prefer to avoid. But central banks could see to it that no individual bank got into real liquidity problems.

Over this decade, eapital is going to be in short supply throughout the world, except per-haps among a few OPEC mem-bers. In our competitive struggle with the Soviet Union, capital can be as potent a weapon as intercon-inental ballistic missiles.

The capital requirements of Soviet satellite countries, together with the domestic requirements of the Soviet people, will be very dif-ficult for the Kremlin to meet, because of the poor performance of the Communist economies. This might cause a change in Soviet at-titudes in other fields and could lead to progress on significant re-ductions in armaments.

It is easy for the Soviet Union to get around a grain embargo. Trade and economic sanctions are hard to impose. The withholding of cap-ital is a different issue, however.

The United States can declare the Polish debt in default and refuse to participate in new refinancing plans; the same goes for Romania's debts and those of other satellites. The European banks would have to fullow suit or assume the burden of all of the debt themselves, and they do not have the capacity to assume such a

When the economic burdens grow sufficiently heavy, the Soviet Union may become more accommodating and, together with the United States, may find it in its in-terest to reduce drastically defense budgets that neither country can really afford.

On Marcos' 'Critics'

On the basis of statements by four people, most of whom are more professional gripers than critics, The New York Times (IHT. Jan. 19.) concluded that "there often seem to be more critics of Mr. Marcos than supporters." Neither the Times nor the "critics" offered any evidence for their statements.

Let me acquaint you with specific figures from a September, 1981 survey of the Metro Manila area. These figures show:

There is a strong consensus among respondents that a marked improvement in their general well-being from the pre-1972 (pre-martial law) period to the present has been attained. While this improvement has not been as marked over the last three years (1978-1981) as the period up to 1978, a clear optimism about prospects for the near future (1981-1984) is evident.

About 47 percent of the respondents report their living standards to be better in 1981 compared to pre-1972. While only 36 percent make the same claim in comparing their living standards with those of a year ago, it is noteworthy that the 19 percent reporting their liv-ing standards in be worse now compared to pre-1972 decrease in 12 percent when comparing their recent living standards to those of speaking, since 1972.

The basis of these findings are responses from 500 Metro Manila residents, 15 years and nider, with a mean age of 32.5 years. On the other hand, the "critics" quoted by The New York Times argue from "impressions," for it isn't likely that these are a motivated at the that they are as motivated as the government in finding out the true state of affairs in the Philippines ways. To each there is a slightly different answer. The first question is: Can the United States intelligently spend $250 billion on defense next year?

That is an astronomical sum, but the answer is yes. U.S. military power suffers from three critical shortfalls: mobility, readiness and sustainability. In terms of mubility, we now have 356 planes and 200 ships to move the 12 U.S.-based divisions to potential battlefields. From the first day of a crisis in the Persian Gulf, this air/sealift would move less than half the tonnage that our forces would need. The shortfall would be even more pronounced if we had to fight in Europe.

Our military readiness has suffered because for years Congressand the Pentagon have held de-fense budgets down by skimping on funds needed in enable our farces to respond rapidly. For example, military pilots' flying time has been out from a peak of 35 bnurs a month to 23, yet flight experience is the single most important factor in pilnts' ability to win

Another false economy, cutting purchases of spare parts, has re-sulted in planes sitting idle in hangars because their engine parts were removed as spares to keep other planes in the air.

Spare Parts

The third problem area, sustainability, requires the stocking of ammunition and spare parts in keep our forces fighting while industry gears up to maintain a con-tinuing flow of supplies. We are in better shape here than our allies are, but, according in former De-fense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, "our Army ground forces could not sustain the battle for 30 days. Before that time, 25 days at the maximum, they would run critically short."

Just plugging these bales in our mobility, readiness and sustainability would soak up tens of billions of dollars without buying a single additional weapon.
The second question is: Will the United States intelligently spend

$250 billion for defense next year? The answer, most assuredly, is nn. The Pentagon will waste much money on cost overruns, on military bases that should be closed. and on excessively generous retirement benefits.

The Pentagon will buy the wrong weapons. It will pay at least 520 billion for B-1 bombers. Last year the Air Force agreed that the B-I would be able to pierce Sovier air defenses for only three years af-ter the first B-1 is completed. When it is no longer able to reach Soviet targets, it will be used for missions that one Air Force gener-

Questions on $250 Million for U.S. Military

The Pentagon will buy the most expensive models of the weapons that we do need. Since weapon costs are always underestimated to make them more attractive, the weapons always cost more than expected, so we bny fewer than planned.

Nor do we get value for the dal-lar. The new M-1 tank costs three times as much as its predecessor, the M-60, but three M-60s can al-ways beat one M-1. The F-15 costs five times as much as the F-5G that we export, but simulated combat shows that four F-5Gs can beat one F-15.

We also overspend on officers. We employ eight times as many admirals for each ship as we did at the end of World War II, seven times as many Air Force generals per aircraft, twice as many Army generals per soldier. The Army has 12 lieutenant colonels for every one in command; the Navy has 12 captains for every command slot at

The third question is the most difficult to answer. Even if we could be sure that the money would be spent intelligently, should we spend $250 billion on defense next year? That is a judgment call, but f think the answer is no.

The judgment centers nn whether the immediate priority is preparing for war or averting further damage to the economy. We can build our readiness for war in a great burry, as the president pro-poses. We should do so if we judge that the prospects of going to war with Moscow in the next 18 months are exceedingly high. Otherwise, we can remedy the defects in mobility, readiness and sustainability over a longer period.

A slower defense buildup than the president proposes also makes sense if we are alarmed by the size nf the federal deficit. Reagan's deficit next year will be more than twice the size of any of his predecessors'. This means the govern-ment will be taking nearly half of all credit available in the United States, thereby driving up interest nomic growth.

Having a Second Child? Whether, Why, When?

By Glenn Collins New York Times Service

BOSTON — Questions about B whether, why and when to have a second child are of more than theoretical interest to the 37 million Americans of the immediate postwar baby-boom genera-tion. "No small oumber of them are poised on the brink of deciding whether to conceive a second child, or are trying to conceive a second child, or are about to deliver a second child," said Pamela Daniels, a research associate at the Wellesley (Mass.) College Center for Research on Women.

"These parents were born in the late '40s or early '50s," she said in an interview. They postponed having children until their late 20s or early 30s, their first child may now be 2 or so, and they're won-

Sixty-eight of the 86 couples studied had second children. According to Census Bureau statistics, only 10 to 13 percent of U.S. ready had one child.

Although many in the study reported that "couple time" and 'self time" were greatly diminished after the birth of the second child, they did find it reassuring that they were veteran parents.
"First children are born to cou-Weingarten said, "but second children are born to families."

A surprising finding, Daniels said, was that in families where both parents were equals in sharing child care, the coming of a second child caused a reversion to a more tradinonal division of labor. Of the women who worked, half took full time out for parenthood after the birth of the second child.

The women in the study experienced an intensification of their focus on the family - a heightened "nesting" phenomenon even if they were previously absorbed in a career. The men found that the second child reinforced their ideas that a father be a good

There is general agreement among clinicians and developmental researchers that there is no perfect spacing pattern, although some have asserted that a threeyear interval is ideal because children younger than age 3 may be less able to handle the threat of a new sibling. Others counter that any interval is not as crucial as variables such as family situation and the first child's temperament.

Numerous couples, of course, do not have the luxury of deciding when to have a second child. For those who can choose, Weingarten said, some of the important factors are the following:

The number of children a couple ultimately wants to have and the age of the mother. "For a first-time mother who has postponed childbirth until age 30 and wants three children, deciding on a five-year interval between babies may be unrealistic," she said.

 The couple's style of parent-hood. "If parents feel that they're done in by disorganization and chaos, then the longer the interval, the more set and organized the experience of having the second child will be," she said, The temperament of the first child. "If the first child is quite ir-ritable or demanding," she said, "or if it has special needs, longer intervals can be helpful."

 Economic considerations. "With an 18-month spacing be-tween children," Dr. Weingarten said, "you'll have problems with hand-me-downs - you can't pass down the crib or the car seat. For some families these financial considerations are crucial."

And then there are career con-siderations. "If mother's a lawyer and has a shift to associate or partner in the offing," she said, "then wider spacing may be helpful. Parents should know in advance that their energies will be divided, and things will be very stressful during

'Ghost Story': Mystery Evaporates

By Vincent Canby New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Almost anyone — filmmakers as well as imaginative 6-year-old children can get a ghost story nff to a good, creepy start that prompts the lis-tener in ask, "And then what hap-pened?" The difficulty is in keeping the suspense building, the com-plications multiplying until, in two or three or four swift strokes, the mystery is resolved, if not necessarily revealed.

In "Ghost Story," which opened in London last week. John Irvin. the director, and Lawrence D. Cohen, who adapted and considerably reduced Peter Strauh's bestselling oovel for the screen, begin very well, right in the opening credits, It is night, which seems tranquil enough, with a bright, full moon. Clouds pass in front of the moon. Nothing odd about that, but then suddenly the clouds don't seem to be clouds. They've become liquid and are dripping down over the moon like thick water. By the time the movie starts, the once-ordinary moon seems to be drowning in a foreign substance.

Cut to a dimly lit, wood-paneled study, a comfortable fire glowing in the fireplace, as three elderly men in dinner jackets sit listening to a fourth old fellow spin a tale of the sort that uses such phrases as "a figure of unspeakable horror," or "beyond any power of words to describe." The racooteur (John Houseman) finishes his tale, which has definitely unsettled his friends (Melvyn Douglas, Fred Astaire and Douglas Fairbanks Jr.). They talk of nightmares, of their age, of death, and make a passing refer-

Those are the first 10 or 12 minutes of "Ghost Story," and if they don't grab you, nothing will. Scientists Offer Theory On Origin of Antibodies

Johns Hopkins University researchers offers an explanation of how the body's immune system is triggered into action. The researchers believe the model could have long-term applications in the treat-ment of allergies and other dis-

The Baltimore team, which worked on it for a decade, suggests basic thesis — which it calls the "immunon" theory — to account for the activation of the defense mechanism. The study focuses particularly on the production of anti-bodies to fight foreign invaders, from pollen to disease-producing microbes.

The theory proposes that the cells that produce antibodies are turned on only when a critically high number of one of the areas on their surfaces, known as receptors. cluster together to form "immu-nons," said Dr. Howard Dintzis, chairman of the department of biophysics at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. These surface receptors recog-nize and chemically attract invad-ing antigens, the foreign substanc-

If so, he said that it could be possible to manipulate the immune system by using the surface recep-tors. This could be done either by enhancing the response to help fight some diseases, perhaps even cancer, or by turning it down to make allergic reactions and autoimmune diseases such as rheumatoid arthritis less severe.

Dr. Dintzis acknowledged, however, that the new research is likely to receive a "skeptical and turbulent response" among researchers studying the immune system. "That's as it should be, it will all come out in the wash," he said.

The research is being published by Dr. Dintzis, his wife Renee Dintzis, an assistant professor of cell biology, and Dr. Bert Vogelstein, an assistant professor of oncology (the study of tumors), in two papers in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences. It is not yet generally available to

Some immunologists who have not yet seen the latest reports but were familiar with preliminary ver-sions cautioned that the theory appeared to be too simplified to explain what they considered a far more complicated system.

One of them, Dr. Donald Mo-

sier of the Institute for Cancer Research, said that he felt the Johns Hopkins approach was "incom-plete. Even if validated, it wouldn't be a major breakthrough But Dr. Manfred Mayer, a Juhns Hopkins immunologist who submitted the paper to the journal, said that he was "guardedly opti-mistic" that the new theory would prove a "useful tool. That is why I think it should be published."

The Johns Hopkins team proposes that immunous are formed by the clustering of about 20 antigen-attracting receptors on the sur-faces of special immune system cells called "B" lymphocytes. When enough immunns are formed, they say, the cells begin growing into the mature cells responsible for producing antibodies and fighting the antigens.

Laker Sees an End to Money Woes

From Agency Dispatches LONDON — Sir Freddie Laker, pioneer in low-cost air travel, said Tuesday he has succeeded in raising loans that will end his airline's cash-From Agency Dispatches
PARIS — France's trade deficit is expected to rise sharply to be-tween 75 and 80 billion francs

"I am flying high today and couldn't be more confident about the future," Sir Freddie said. He said he had raised £60 million from McDonnell Douglas Finance Corp. and the Clydesdale Bank of Scotland. This will permit him to extend the time for repayment of loans from a consortium of 13 banks headed by Midland Bank and from a banking group headed by the U.S. Export-Import Bank. Laker owes the Midland consortium £68.6 million and £1224 million to the Ex-Im Bank. The debts were incurred for the purchase of planes for his fleet of European Airbus, DC-10, Boeing 707 and BAC 1-11 jets.

Banking sources, meanwhile, said, McDonnell Douglas is expected to convert about $60 million of Laker debt that it holds into equity as part of the restructuring. McDonnell Douglas is also considering mjecting up to £5 million of fresh cash into Laker through its finance arm if certain conditions can be met the sources said. He told a news conference the francs per month. The seasonally adjusted deficit in December was 7.89 billion francs.

Although the 1981 deficit fell to conditions can be met, the sources said.

Timex, U.K. Firm Plan to Sell 3-D Camera

New York Times Service NEW YORK - Timex and Nimslo International, a U.K. firm that plans to market a camera that takes three-dimensional pictures, have agreed in principle for Timex to purchase and distribute 800,000 of the cameras, valued at $125 million, over the next two years, Nimslo said

DeLorean Says N. Ireland Site a Mistake

LONDON — John DeLorean, U.S. head of the tronbled Belfast car firm, was quoted in an interview Tuesday as saying he made a serious mistake in launching his company in Northern Ireland.

He told the London Times that his plant which manufactures sports cars for the U.S. market had been fire-hombed 140 times. Company executives had been fired at by snipers many times, he added. "We grossly underestimated the magnitude of the problems," he was quoted as saying. However, U.K. government sources said Tuesday that the only known scrious incident at the plant was the firebombing of a prefabricated but containing important records, which happened last May after the death of jailed Republican hunger striker Bobby Sands.

. Mr. DeLorean said he was determined that the company should survive and was negotiating with several unnamed concerns to try to help the firm out of its cash crisis. DeLorean has been badly hit by the shump in the U.S car market. A company spokesman in Belfast said Monday night that most workers had been put on a one-day week.

NEW YORK — Stock prices in New York closed narrowly higher Tuesday in moderate trading as investors moved to the sidelines amid conflicting signals on interest

The Dow Jones industrial nverage finished up 0.86 at 852.55, advances led declines by around 800 to 630 and volume slipped to 45 million shares from 47.72 million

Most major banks raised the prime rate to 16½ percent, follow-ing the lead of Citibank and Crocker National on Monday. However, a dip in the federal funds rate boosted the bond market somewhat, which in turn influenced stocks, analysts said. The federal funds rate, on overnight loans between banks. dropped as low as 15 percent from Monday's close of 15%.

Michael Metz of Opponheimer

& Co. said stocks were sure to record some gains simply on the basis of technical factors after Monday's sharp decline, caused by the prime rate increases and a smaller than expected drop in U.S. money supply reported last Fri-day. The Dow Jones average dropped 19.41 points Monday af-ter rising some 28 points in the prior two sessions on expectations that interest rates would case.

In foreign exchange trading the dollar was mixed against other major currencies after a relatively active morning's trading, dealers The dollar had rallied strongly in the Far East and Europe in the morning in a continuation of Monday's gains in New York, then declined on profit-taking before re-covering slightly around midday. It was quoted at mid-day at 2.3515 Deutsche marks, compared with an opening 2.3540.

In London gold closed at around $380.00 an ounce, up from the afternoon fix at $379.15 higher than Monday's $379 at the elose, dealers said.

A number of U.S. economic indicators were released Tuesday. The Commerce Department said new orders received by U.S. factories rose $354 million, or 0.2 per-cent to a seasonally adjusted total of $160.28 billion in December. The increase, the second in a row after three straight monthly declines, follows a revised 0.6 percent November advance.

U.K.Business Group Sees Stagnant Trend

LONDON — Demand and output in Britain over the next four months are not likely to show any significant improvement, according to the latest quarterly industrial trends survey of the Confederation of British Inclustry.

But there has been a small increase in business confidence, partly due to increased optimism about export prospects over the next 12 months, the CBI said. The total of 1,709 manufacturing firms which took part in the survey account for about half the country's exports and employ around 3 million persons.

"Demand remains very low, with 93 percent of participants (in the survey) still expecting their output to be limited in the next four months by a shortage of orders or sales," the CBI said. In October, the CBI industrial trends survey showed 91 percent of firms expected slack demand to limit production.

Competitiveness remains very poor, with nearly 75 percent of exporters reporting uncompetitive prices as the major obstacle to increasing sales, it said. Employment levels are expected to decline further, it added.

The only encouraging signs from the survey are an improvement in profitability from an extremely low base, a slight firming of investment intentions and a continuing improvement in output per head, the CBI said.

WITNESS TO POWER The Nixon Years

By John Ehrlichman, 432 pp. (Illustrated.) $17.50. Simon & Schuster, 1230 Avenue of the Americas, New York 10020.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

The Old Man, Rufus, The Leader of the Free World, Milhous and Thelma's Husband, "depending on the cir-cumstances." And Nixon, too, like so many of us, sometimes had trouble telling the difference between a Haldeman and an Ehrlichman. These are harmless, if amusing, items of gos-

So Nixon had a lot to drink after giving his big speech at the 1964 Re-publican National Convention, "made some clumsy passes of a young woman in the group" and left John Ehrlichman "convinced that Nixon's drinking could cost him any chance of a return to public life." That's gossip too, though not quite so harmless and

So during the period of December, 1971, when Henry A. Kissioger was under attack in the press for his leaked remarks on the India-Pakistan war, "Nixon wondered aloud if Henry needed psychiatric care." That's an item of gossip that begins to approach

Thus the first thing to be said about John Ehrlichman's "Witness to Powuntil now because the former White House chief adviser on domestic affairs didn't get access to his own re-cords until 1980 — is that it mixes every imaginable form of gossip, from the purely trivial to the outright mali-

Descent into the Confessional

But the book is more than merely gossipy. So Ehrlichman oow believes that it was Nixon himself who ordered the break-in of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist. So during the bad time in April 1973, while Nixon and the soon-to-be-dismissed Haldeman and Ehrlichman were oo Air Force One flying to Mississippi, the author went forward to the flight deck, stood behind the pilots and looked out the front windshield.

"As I stood there, I was taken with the realization that I could end everyone's troubles by throwing myself against the controls, wedging myself between the pilot's yoke and the pilot. We'd all be gone to about a minute and a half. I stood there charting with the navigator, measuring my chances for a moment; then turned and went back to my seat." That's a good deal more than gossip, a sudden, bizarre descent ioto the confessional. Thus, "Witness to Power" is also accusatory, funoy, revelatory, apologetic, vindictive, analytic and mournful.
Indeed the book is just about everything except consistent. In fact, in many of its passages it's several of these contradictory things at once, Thus, io the chapter that reveals how "Nixoo said he believed America's hlacks could only marginally benefit from federal programs because blacks were genetically inferior to whites," Ehrlichman concludes by defending the New areas and a program to the line. the Nixon record on race relations. It is hard to tell whether he is dignifying his malice or tempering his praise.

This is often the case. Starting off his chapter called "The Press," he writes that far from suffering "dementia where the press was concerned," his leader was mostly "calculated and deliberate" in his conduct. He then offers several examples that make Nix-on look slightly demented, makes the interesting point that like a flower that blooms only in pitch dark. Nixon could be spontaneous in public as long as the press wasn't present, con-ducts a lengthy assault oo the charac-ter and behavior of CBS newscaster Dan Rather, and concludes with an anecdote that proudly exhibits how he once won Nixon's approval for his abomination of the press. Sometimes in "Witness to Power."

SO H.R. Haldeman used to refer to Ehrlichman doesn't seem to be doing anything at all, as in a long section in anything at all, as in a long section in the chapter called "The Politician" where he simply quotes a ramble conference among the president a several of his advisers. Or perhaps i only I who don't know what the a ther is up to. For the book makes t pretense to being chronological ar exhaustive. For example, if you were Martian that didn't know that Via President Spiro T. Agnew was event ally forced to resign his office fact that Ehrlichman never troubles t explain — you would not fully appre-ciate the book's many slighting refer ences to the former vice presideot. So it's possible that I'm lacking th more arcane information required t provide a context for some of the at thor's comments. Ehrlichman can b subtle and witty. He isn't concerne with providing an orderly record, ex cept in his three chapters on Water gate, where, if anything, his narrative becomes defensively overdetailed.

Strength of Feeling

I'd be inclined to dismiss "Witnes to Power" as too sketchy and disor ganized to be read for anything but it many varieties of gossip, except that makes another curious impression that is not at all without its appeal. I very disorderliness serves to height one's sense of the author's strength feeling — his anger, hurt and hewil erment at being caught in the machi ery that eventually destroyed his Thus one tends to believe him when the end he describes his regret at SOLTOW.

Given the emotional buffeti wa've taken from all the Waterg: books - from the slick manipulati of John W. Dean 3d's "Blind Am' tion" (a project that Ehrlichman ur erstandably excoriates) to the evasioess of Nixon's own "RN" could be forgiven for suspecting E lichman of calculating his effects. I somehow we doo't. We get a ser that he, of all the conspirators, I learned and changed. We feel that reason he has failed to write a co structive and coherent memoir is t he's still too overwhelmed by his eflicting feelings, Yugoslavia's worry is negotiating the release of virtually twothirds of its internationals from foreign teams, while Austria, with seven "mercenaries," has compounded the issue by sacking its manager and hiring, for the Cup only, Ernst Happel - who must himself negotiate time off from his West German elub, SV Hamburg.

But any sympathy we feel pales beside the plight of Poland's team. Some of the older internationals are on the outside looking in, waiting for news as they play in France or Belgium. OKLAHOMA CTTY — A women's softball team will do this summer what Mao's revolutionaries couldn't in 1949: cross the Formosa Strait to Taiwan. Taiwan has told International Softball Federation officials in Oklahoma City that it will invite a women's softball team from the People's Republic of China to the Fifth Women's World Softball Championships. Don Porter, the federation's secretary-general, said Monday. And the Chinese have said they will go,

Life Begins at 10 for Some Horses

By Steven Crist New York Times Service

NEW YORK - When John Henry nosed out Peat Moss to win the Jockey Club Gold Cup last Oc-tober, much was made of the fact that two 6-year-olds had defeated the best field of the year. But in human years - determined by tripling a horse's age — it was only a case of 18-year-olds defeating rivals who were 9, 12 and 15.

Horses today frequently live to be 25 to 30 years old, but rarely race past the age of 6. By then, the faster ones have been sent to the breeding shed to perpetuate their pedigrees and enrich their owners. Most of the others have infirmities that prevent them from winning at even the lowest levels or from running at all, and they are retired.

For those who manage to remain sound however, getting older a fountain of youth for elderly usually means getting better. In those cases, life on the track can begin at 6, 8 or even 10.

Flying Childers, one of the first great modern racers, was 6 when he made his debut in England in 1721. In 1740, an act of Parliament decreed that no horse younger than 5 could race. But as breeding and training thoroughbreds grew into a full-time profession for more than a few noblemen, people with horses grew tired of waiting five years for a return on their investments. By 1780, 2-year-olds were being raced.

Last year, Behavin Jerry, a 17-year-old gelding, won a claiming race at Commodore Downs in Fairview, Pa. Commodore Downs,

Have a Nice Program

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK - Gradually there became less and less to say. Eventually almost everything had been said at least once, most things had been said many times, and many things had been said thousands of times.

Entire days passed during which nothing was said that had not been said before I became obsessed with the inevitability of saying and hearing the very same things I had said and heard yesterday. last week, last month. "Good morning." "Did you sleep well?"

"Me too." "Want

This was said constantly in the 1930s by Americans who thought England was trying to trick us into a European war. My mother said it at least twice a week whenever the question of a possible European war arose. At least five times a week she also said, "Boy, you've got no more gumption than a bump on a log,"

This led me to conclude that it would be more interesting to say the things we no longer say than the things we now say so often that nobody listens to them anymore. Ideally, of course, the most inter-esting things to say would be things never said before, but since there was practically nothing in this line available I reasoned that reviving old, discarded material was the sensible way to put new variety into daily discourse.

I should explain that at this time I was working on my electronic computerized miniaturized Human Contact Synthesizer, or Huconzer as it is now known. My idea was to conserve human energy by provid-ing the public with a small portable device programmed to emit a full year of daily conversations, thus making it unnecessary for people to spend energy in doing their own talking.

It was childishly easy to program Huconzers for, say, a couple.

On rising in the morning, one per-son would activate the device (worn lavaliere-style around the neck) to say, "Good morning." This would activate the other machine to say, "Did you sleep well?" Whereupon the first responded, "Fine," provoking an immediate "Me too" from its counterpart.

The flaw in the design was its utter predictability. Many of our first customers said they tired of their machines' constantly repeating "You too," whenever someone else's machine urged them to "have a nice day." Why, they asked, couldn't their machines sometimes vary the response by saying, "Thanks, and you have a nice day too"?

From this I deduced that though there was nothing new to be said, there remained a vestigial human hunger for a bit of spicy variety now and then during personal en-counters. It was at this point that I hit upon the idea of programming the machines to say things that used to be said constantly but had not been said for many years.

This led to production of the Huconzer II, and curious results. veral buyers, for example, were badly beaten by tradesmen who had urged them to "have a nice day." They attributed this surly behavior to the Huconzer II's replying, "Boy, you've got no more gumption than a bump on a log."

"An entirely inappropriate re-onse," one customer wrote. Since the man obviously had no zest for life's entertaining non sequiturs, I suggested he was unfit for the Huconzer II and had him return it in trade for a Huconzer III, which confined itself to saying, "Yesh, man," and "You better believe it."

Another typical complaint came from a man who had hoped to impress his employer at a three-marini lunch. Upon being asked how he wanted his martini, his Huconzer II replied, "We had to go over there once and pull Eng-iand's chestnuts out of the fire; this time, let 'em roast."

"You think you're the cat's pajamas, don't you?" replied the boss, having turned on his Huconzer II so as not to waste any more time talking. I am sending the dissatis-fied customer a Huconzer IV which confines itself to saying,

Christopher Tree

By Michael Zwerin International Herold Tribune

PARIS — Christopher Tree, a One-man orchestra, paid $1,200 to fly his ton of instruments over from New York in 1973 - timpani, clarinets, bells, gongs, pipes, flutes, Japanese copper baby rattles, chimes of glass and metal, one six-foot Ti-betan temple born. There was supposed to be a tour but after a concert in Nancy and another at the Espace Cardin in Paris the tour disappeared into thin air. Tree lives in thin air, thrives out there in lonely, rarified space where few others want or dare to go. This lithe orchestra-man glides and dances barefoot in candlelit semi-darkness, reinventing a plaintive, impulsive musical planet with its own harmony and structures that obb and flow in new ways at each performance.

"A sound you can see," the Oakland Tribune said, and an NBC-TV commentator said of Tree, "He doesn't play upon the instruments, he awakens them." Tree cannot read music, he knows no songs, he cannot play with bands, and his singularity has forced him to invent his own circuit for what Time magazine called "bursts of love and intri-

He has performed his "sponta-neous music" in Kenny's Pub in New York, San Quentin prison, Trinity Chapel on Wall Street, in schools for handicapped children ("I felt furny, like I could fly" said one child afterward), mental hospitals ("It's like what ought to be," one patient reacted), and chapels in the south of France.

At 49, Tree's creased face, burning eyes and tumbling hair make you think of a mountain man come down from his cave, or perhaps tree house, for a short visit to lower altitudes. He lives with his wife and two children in the not so chic French department of Mayenne, 150 miles southwest of Paris, which he describes proudly as "the Midwest of France, It doesn't attract too many people."

Attracted to places that do not attract people, Tree has lived just outside the village of Sainte-Suzanne for five years but still speaks no French. This has more to do with lifestyle than with lingnistics or learning blocks, and

Robert F. Kennedy Jr. and Emily Ruth Black will be married April 3 m a Protestant church in Bloomington, Ind. The bride, a 24-year-old attorney, said she has chosen to be married in Bloomington because she was reared there. But her brother, Tom Black, says he be-lieves finances were partly respon-sible for the decision not to hold the wedding in New York City. He said the wedding would have 500 guests and would be less expensive in Bloomington. The bridegroom said earlier that the wedding would be in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York City's largest Roman Catholic church. Instead, the service will be at the First Christian Church, where the bride was baptized. Bob Shrum, a spokesman in Washington for Kennedy's uncle, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, said the ceremony would be Catholic. . . Evan-gelist Rex Humbard says he feels "like any other father who loses his only daughter," but when Aimee Elizabeth Humbard says her vows on Valentine's Day, it won't be a normal wedding.
